

Trader Joe's Taste Test : Frozen Langoustine Tails

The package instructions couldn't have been more tempting : "Thaw, rinse with cold water, and serve." About the size of medium sized shrimp these little pink curls have the consistency of lobster or crab, which isn't surprising, because they come from the same family. Langoustines are north atlantic lobsters, usually harvested in Scotland and Norway. Unfortunately, these particular langoustines have zero flavor. I can't think of any preparation method that would have improved them, short of not buying them. Grade: F.