

About Cooking Monster

Authors

Dave

A web designer by trade, Dave has been working with computers since the 80's, and as a webmaster since the late 90's. He's been cooking since he was a teenager, and does all of the cooking in his household. A collector of cookbooks, he reads them like novels. He got most of his love of cooking from his mom. He lives in Alexandria, Virginia.

Cooking Monster's Code of Ethics

Here at Cooking Monster, we're not averse to accepting food or products from people in the business, but we promise that if we ever do, we'll disclose the fact in anything we write about. We do believe in using associate links to places like Amazon, in an effort to recoup some of the money we've invested in this project. Dollars to donuts, if there's a link to a product on Amazon, there will also be our referral information. All of the opinions expressed on these pages will be our own, and we promise not to shill for any sponsor without completely disclosing that fact.

Privacy Notice

We do collect tracking information on your visit to the site, but it's the impersonal kind that websites normally keep track of – things like the website you clicked to get here, or what you searched for to pull up our pages. Should you decide to register to leave a comment on the site, you'll need to provide your email address, and we promise never to sell your information for any purpose, though we may contact you about information specifically regarding this website. Should you prefer not to receive any such emails, please use our contact form, and opt-out.

Please note: Cooking Monster is in no way related to the trademarked characters of Muppets, Inc. Co.

All of the entries to this blog belong to CookingMonster.com and all rights are reserved. If you would like to reprint or quote our material, please contact us.